Hello

My apologies for sending this late as I have been away. Hopfully there may be some "gems" from my presentations over many years in several different countries.

My experience covers from the days as a young dentist in the UK learning from under eminent British anaesthetists such as like Sir Robert Mackintosh , Drummond Jackson and fellow NZ dentist. I then travelled to to teach at the USC Dental School before Stanley Malamad, who was well known to many New Zealand dentists. Much of this is included in the enclosed CV. Much of my work was with ultra-light sedation and patient management and later chronic orofacial pain.

I hope you will be interested and if I can be of help me, let me know. I am now reluctantly retiring at the age of 80 which is considered young in the US. My tutors at UCLA were Professor Richard Kroening and Professor Janet Travell (former White House doctor to Kennedy). Dr Travell was 90 years old when I attended her courses, a great experience. Old soldiers etc etc . . . ! And Dental and Medical Kiwis have pioneered much of what they have the honour of being part of. In my case Sir John Walsh was probably the person who got me going.

Kind regards

Dr Peter Foreman
