Thank you for the recent webinar.

I have listened to the proposals and subsequent debate and concerns.

I don't believe the current CPD system is really that effective - certainly better than none but I know from personal experience how little is gained by sitting in a lecture

The concept of peer accountability is good.

I like the idea of planning the years goals and committing them to paper, also the reflective review

I have worked in a remote rural practice and despite that can readily buy into this concept and make it work. Surely being a professional person should engender a high level personal responsibility but it's also good to be held to account by a peer.

If there are real concerns about certain individuals then maybe the issue really lies with their training and admittance into the profession in the 1st place.

Thanks for all the hard work.

Paul Reeves.
