Q5 Please describe your specific concern/s with the proposal

OHTs are not trained with sufficient knowledge and skills to properly diagnose and treat adult teeth. The treatment planning needs to involve the complex of entire endodontium, periodontium, occlusion and much more rather than simply the tooth. If all you have is a hammer, everything looks like a nail. It sounds very easy to have fillings placed on the tooth, but can OHTs understand all of the potential consequences, complications, and limitation of the treatment? It is really not about the age limit, but the competency of diagnosis and treatment planning. Lack of knowledge can result in overtreatment and mistreatment, significantly jeopardizing patients' oral health in the long run.

Furthermore, the severe unmet treatment demand for teenagers under 18 was never addressed, which is the scope of practice for OHTs. A great number of teenagers are unable to access to dental care especially in the rural area. It is more important to address those problems first before blindly raise the age limit.

The proposal would not only deteriorate the current health care that teenagers receive, but also make adults suffer from compromised treatments.
