one objective is to provide more affordable dentistry which in theory is nice. i liken it though to the theory of providing affordable housing which again is a nice theory but we all know how successful that is. dentistry has a cost. the dental school in otago is about to double the amount of dentists they graduate, australia already has too many. possibly look at subsidies but more training for OHT's will not reduce the cost of care as costs or overheads are still there and they have to be paid accordingly.
