Page 4: Proposed registration pathways

Q9

Yes

Do you believe the proposed changes will help reduce barriers to registration for suitably trained overseas practitioners?

Q10

Please tell us why:

New Zealand is proposing new pathways for registration for general dentists which would immensely help me register as a licensed dentist there without going through the long, highly costly examinations of the NDEB to register as a dentist there. I am a licensed dentist already in the UAE which takes its healthcare seriously. Dentists like myself are experienced, eager to immigrate and provide our services overseas to communities that need it most. However the processes of registering in overseas countries like Canada, UK, Australia are extremely bureaucratic and all examinations must be done in the respected countries. The cost of the travel, courses, examinations takes a toll. The UK is already having a dental crisis with dental deserts while having 6000 dentists waiting to give the exams. In my opinion the best option would be to have a 6 month module where overseas dentists can learn and understand the respected countries healthcare system. And then get registered to practice after having all credentials checked thoroughly. But the proposed pathways will most definitely be better for us overseas dentists who are willing to immigrate and settle in New Zealand.

Q12

Please tell us why:

Yes but more countries need to be recognised. Not just western countries. The University which I graduated from in the UAE had the Australian Dental Council recognise it as a top tier university and yet we are not mutually recognised overseas which causes overseas dentists to search for other countries where recognition and registration is much simpler and much faster.

Q14

Please tell us why:

The minimum hours requirement is what the UK currently has which is of no issue. However more countries need to be recognised. Like the UAE

Q22

Please tell us why:

These clinical based exams especially in Canada leave no room for Human error at all. Canada's clinical based exams are notoriously despised due to lack of transparency, very high cost per attempt, highest failure rates. For the past 3 years there have also been protests outside the NDEB examinations offices having dentists raise their voices about the sheer lack of transparency with these exams. They are trained, licensed in their respective countries but some have spent 5 years still trying to get through the equivalency processes just to get registered. The examinations should be theory based and also it would help if these examinations are also provided by prometric online by testing centers like in Dubai
